

The

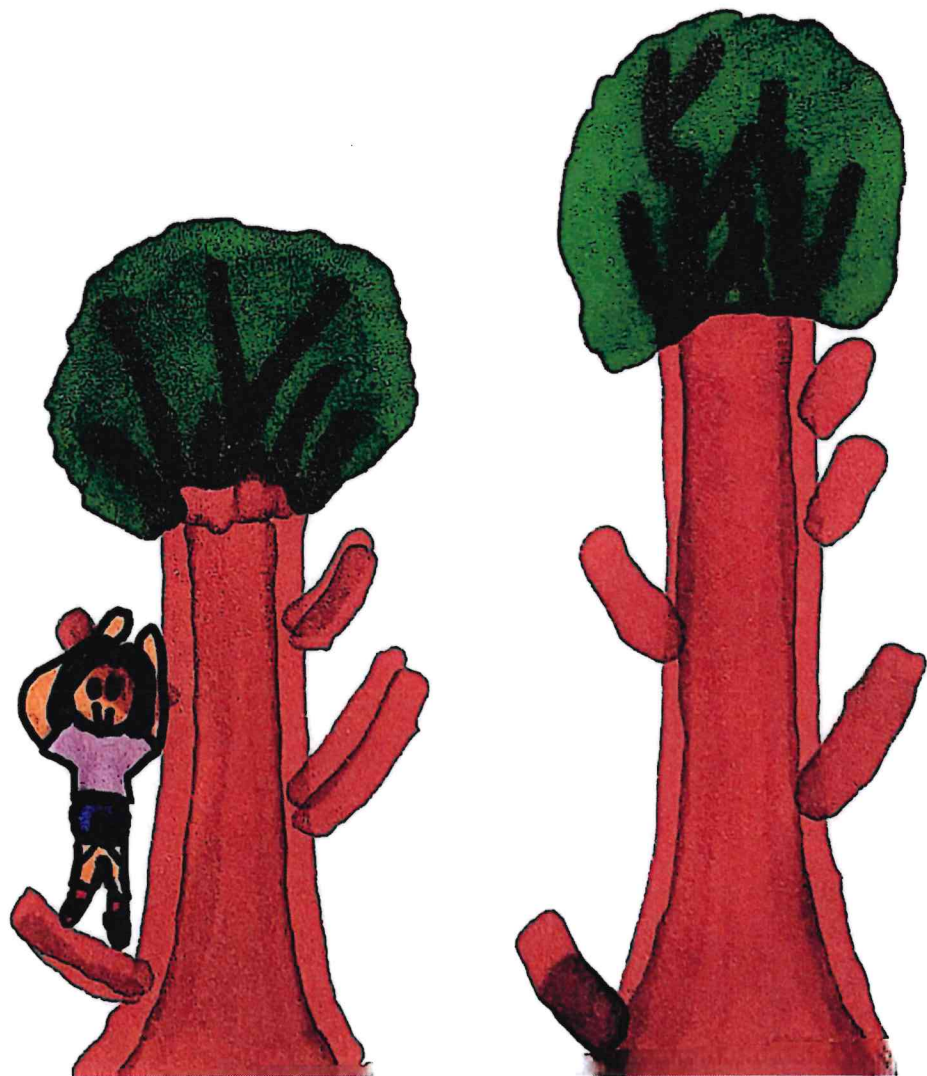

Butterfly
Promise

On Sunday, Jazmen White went to a park with her mom and dad. First, they went over to the swings to push Jazmen. She was having a lot of fun! "Wee!", she said with a smile! She was standing up on the swing. She loved that.

Then, they started having climbing races on trees. Where else would they race? Jazmen won the first round, her dad won the second round, and her mom won the last. They were having so much fun climbing trees.

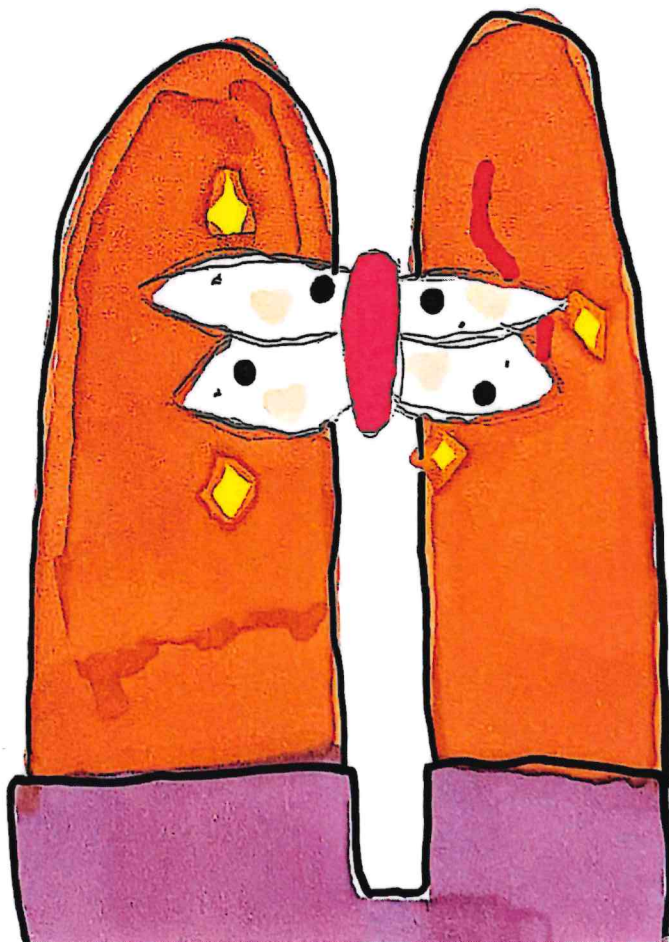

Last; they went under the tree to have a picnic. Jazmen looked up at the tree and saw something she had never seen before. It was like a nest but with "sparkles," a home but hanging. "What?" she thought. "This is weird!" she said.

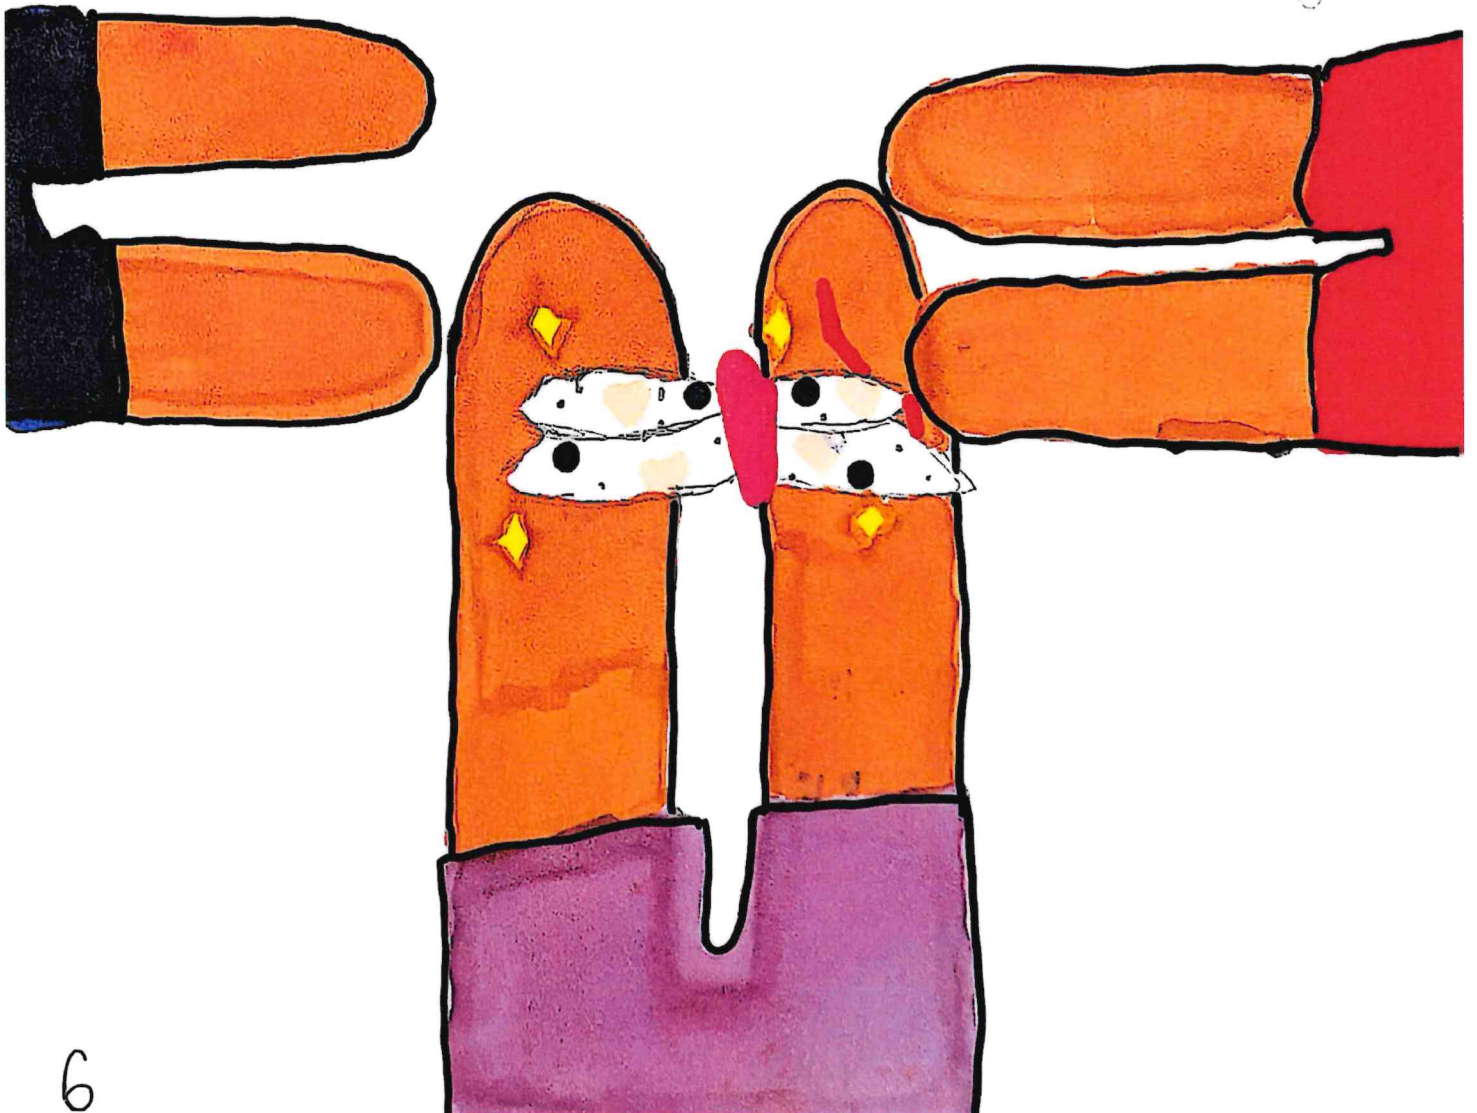

The nest was weird. It wasn't like a normal nest, it was literally glowing! It was hard not to explode because Jazmen is a curious girl. Jazmen couldn't take it anymore she jumped up and grabbed the nest. Her parents thought she was going nuts. She was so full the nest almost fell!

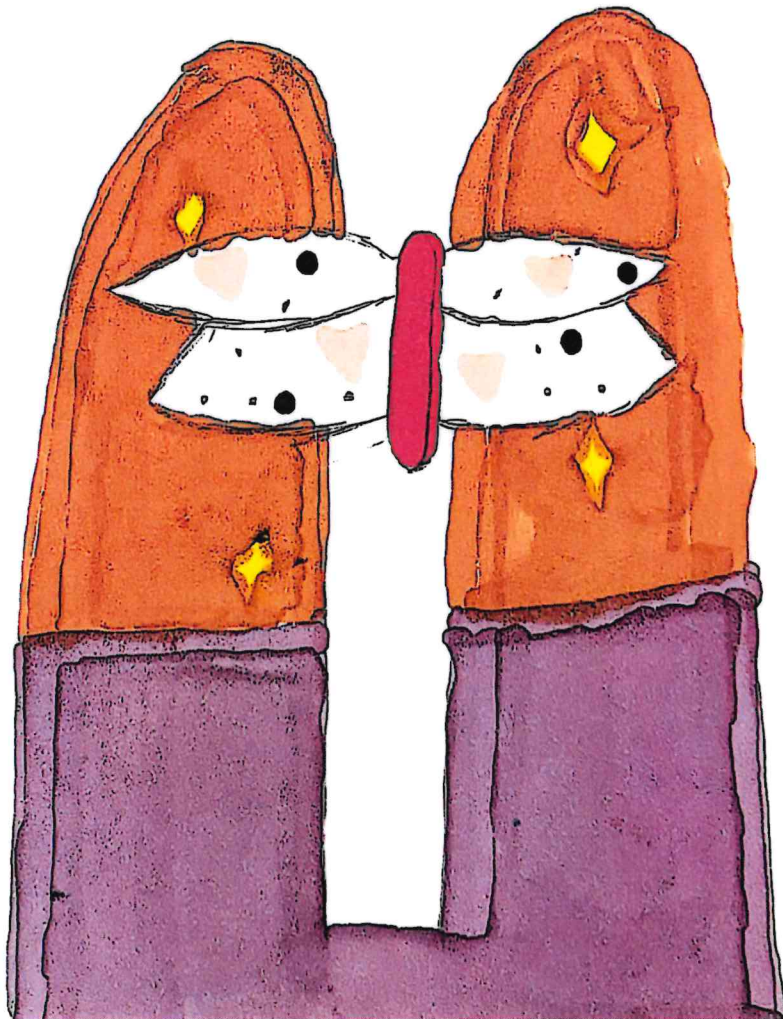

It got even weirder when butterflies started shooting out of the nest! But Jazmen loved butterflies! Jazmen reached out to catch one. But she got a surprise.

Jazmen looked at the butterfly in shock. She was the rarest butterfly in the world! Jazmen nearly fainted. "Mom, dad!", she yelled. Her mom and dad had a look. They knew all about butterflies.

This butterfly was the healing butterfly. Jazmen had a cut in her hand. Jazmen wisperd, "Please heal this cut." In an instant, it was gone! "Can I keep you?", Jazmen said. The butterfly nodded.

"Jazmen wisperd, "Thank you, Thank you,
Thank you!" She promised she would love the butterfly forever.
