“Whatever brings you to Vegas PBS, I want you to know that your dedication and support is what sustains our mission.”

While sitcoms and contemporary scripted dramas may not be the first things you think of when thinking about PBS programs, the underlying ethos is in perfect alignment with the mission and goal of public broadcasting: to reflect, represent and serve all members of the public. The Hispanic population in Clark County has climbed from single digits in the midcentury to now about 34%. The first non-Native American on record to explore the Las Vegas Valley was Mexican scout Rafael Rivera, who has a street named after him in the southwestern portion of Las Vegas. “Las Vegas” itself is a phrase borrowed from the Spanish language.

Bienvenidos a Las Vegas (Welcome to Las Vegas), the newest Vegas PBS Original, is a powerful and engaging documentary exploring the history of Hispanic and Latino communities in Southern Nevada, be they entrepreneurs, entertainers or activists. This program commemorates the stories of Hispanic and Latino Las Vegans and their incredible tales of persistence and ingenuity. We specialize in connecting communities with each other and this is one more way we can celebrate our neighbors’ histories.

I can’t talk about Bienvenidos a Las Vegas without also giving kudos and recognition to host and producer, Maria Silva. A lifelong Las Vegan, Silva has had a consistent newsbeat on the development and evolution of Las Vegas. That experience, combined with her unbridled enthusiasm, brings a specialized expertise that you frankly won’t find anywhere else.

Tune in on Tuesday, April 23 at 9 p.m. to watch Bienvenidos a Las Vegas, find it online at vegaspbs.org/shows, or stream it on the PBS App.

Vegas All In also continues this month, featuring the people who make Las Vegas a world-renowned city. One of my favorite segments on the show so far features UNLV history professor Michael Green delivering a fascinating biography of the Sahara casino. Check the primetime schedules for episode dates, or visit vegaspbs.org/schedules

I’d also like to thank everyone who came out to The Big Party! It was a wonderful evening celebrating the power of public media to make a difference in the world.

Whatever brings you to Vegas PBS, I want you to know that your dedication and support is what sustains our mission. Without you, there’d be no engine to drive us ahead into the future of service and storytelling. Thank you for watching and thank you for your support.
