MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT & GENERAL MANAGER

Out of Many, One

By Mare Mazur, President and General Manager, Vegas PBS

Why does the U.S. Constitution matter?

This November, acclaimed filmmaker Ken Burns invites us to rediscover the ideals that shaped our nation in The American Revolution, premiering Sunday, November 16, on Vegas PBS. This sweeping, six-part documentary explores not only how independence was won, but what it was fought for — the audacious belief that ordinary people could build something extraordinary together.

The delegates who gathered in Philadelphia faced deep divisions and daunting questions. How should a new nation govern itself? What freedoms must be protected? Their debates were intense, but from spirited discussion came lasting principles — a framework designed to balance individual liberty with shared responsibility.

“As we gather for Thanksgiving, we can take inspiration from their determination to find common ground.”

As we gather for Thanksgiving, we can take inspiration from their determination to find common ground. The Constitution endures because it reflects our ongoing effort to live up to those founding ideals — that unity and diversity are not opposites, but strengths. E pluribus unum. Out of many, one.

That same spirit thrives in Southern Nevada. Despite recent reductions in federal funding, Vegas PBS continues to serve as your community's trusted source for education, storytelling and connection. Your generosity and engagement make that possible. Together, we demonstrate that a community united by purpose can overcome any challenge.

This season, we give thanks for you — our members, donors and viewers — who believe in the power of public media to inform, inspire and unite.

With gratitude,
Mare

COVER FEATURE — THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

The Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776. Painting by John Trumbull, 1818. Credit: Yale University Art Gallery

The Long Road

by Michael Green, Ph.D.

UNLV History Professor Michael Green connects the ideals of the American Revolution to the history of the Silver State

In 1776,

when Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence, present-day Nevada was part of the Spanish empire. But we still feel the effects of Jefferson's words.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal," was more aspirational than real, but the aspiration remains noble. Nevada is similar: in 1864, our constitution limited the vote to white people. Voters amended it in 1880 to include all males, but the tortured history of civil rights for Black people and for others include Nevada, which became known as "the Mississippi of the West." African Americans, especially in Las Vegas and Reno, had to apply pressure to pass legislation, get jobs, and change attitudes — thanks also to help from some powers who sympathized with them.

The Seneca Falls Convention extended Jefferson by saying "all men and women."

In 1869, Nevada became the first state to vote to amend its constitution to allow women's suffrage, but the proposal failed to pass the required second time. In 1914, Nevada became one of the last states to extend the vote to women, who had to overcome opposition from Nevada's most powerful leaders and internal divisions on how best to achieve their goals — just as the founders disagreed over policy and politics. As Ben Franklin might say, these groups did their best to hang together so they did not hang separately.

While women's rights advocates rewrote Jefferson, he rewrote John Locke, who described the government's duty to protect "life, liberty and property." Jefferson changed property to "the pursuit of happiness." For some, that meant property, for others, government power. Nevadans have a history of opposing government overreach and certainly have encouraged visitors to pursue happiness in ways Jefferson didn't contemplate. ☺

Rick Steves' Europe: Istanbul: Capital of Emperors and Sultans

Saturday, November 22 at 9 a.m.

Istanbul's rich heritage spans the centuries from Christian Byzantium to Muslim Ottoman rule to today's thriving city. We start our look back at the Roman-tinged Hippodrome, then indulge in the ancient ritual of the Turkish bath. We take in the Blue Mosque and the grand Hagia Sophia, taste Turkish delight at the venerable Spice Market and explore Topkapı Palace and its harem room deep within.

The Lawrence Welk Show: Thanksgiving

Saturday, November 22 at 5 p.m.

It's great to be "Home for the Holidays" as this show tells us at the start. Sandi and the girls invite us to "Count Your Blessings," Dick and Gail tell us to "Button Up Your Overcoat" and the band takes us to the "Winter Wonderland." Clay reminds us to "Try A Little Kindness" while Joe Feeney's "Be Thankful" brings the perfect close to this Thanksgiving special.
