MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT & GENERAL MANAGER

Striking A Chord

By Mare Mazur, President and General Manager, Vegas PBS

Seventy years ago, under the glittering lights of Las Vegas resorts, Black entertainers like Sammy Davis, Jr., were selling out showrooms and being celebrated for their talents. But when the curtains came down, so did the stark reality of Jim Crow. Segregation meant Davis couldn't stay at the casinos he performed at, instead having to find lodging in the Westside.

After a car accident in 1954 that cost him his eye and nearly his life, Davis found solace in the similarities between Black and Jewish history. He saw a kindred spirit of perseverance and endurance against systemic oppression. It led to his conversion to Judaism a few years later. Soon, Davis became a regular performer at the short-lived but historic Moulin Rouge, the first integrated hotel casino in Las Vegas. Herb Tobman, the general manager of the Moulin Rouge's casino, was also Jewish.

Davis's conversion drew the ire of both African American and Jewish American communities. It's a microcosm of the complex relationship between two groups that have faced similar, yet distinct, hardships. While shared ideals of justice united Black and Jewish people, they were also divided by the realities of race in America.

This February, Henry Louis Gates, Jr., leads us through a new docuseries that examines this very topic: Black and Jewish America: An Interwoven History. In this four-part program, see how the historic alliance between Black and Jewish Americans suffered as each group turned inward, prioritizing their own struggles and agendas in an increasingly fragmented social and political landscape.

Check page 7 for when to watch Black and Jewish America: An Interwoven History, along with other programs airing during Black History Month, such as African Americans: The Las Vegas Experience and Independent Lens: Storming Caesars Palace featuring the lauded local activist Ruby Duncan. And be sure to read Claytee White's article on page 6 for a further discussion on how this topic connects to us locally.

Last December would have marked Sammy Davis, Jr.'s 100th birthday, bringing renewed attention to both the brilliance and the complexity of his life. Looking back, it's easier to see how much of his story was about navigating identities that didn't fit neatly into any single box. That same tension — and possibility — runs through Black and Jewish America: An Interwoven History, Independent Lens: Storming Caesars Palace and the other programs featured this month. Together, they remind us that some of the most interesting and lasting stories come from voices that don't sound the same.

“Thank you for being part of this community and for the trust you place in us to tell these stories well.”

Vegas PBS is proud to share them with you. Thank you for being part of this community and for the trust you place in us to tell these stories well.

With appreciation,
Mare

Black and Jewish Nevada

This month, Vegas PBS proudly presents Black and Jewish America: An Interwoven History. We asked historian Claytee White to provide some context and reflect on the relationship between Black and Jewish communities across America, but also in Southern Nevada. White is the founding director of UNLV's Oral History Research Center, and her work has chronicled the fascinating and complex history of marginalized groups in Las Vegas.

by Claytee White

Jews made up half of the young people who participated in the Mississippi Freedom Summer in 1964.

Freedom Summer volunteers were met with violent resistance from the Ku Klux Klan and members of state and local law enforcement. News coverage of beatings, false arrests and even murder drew international attention to the civil rights movement. The increased awareness it brought to voter discrimination helped pass the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Among the first wave of volunteers to arrive on June 15 were Michael Schwerner and Andrew Goodman. They along with James Chaney, a local black activist, disappeared after visiting Philadelphia, Mississippi, where they were investigating the burning of a church. Their names became nationally known as the hunt for their killers began. Six weeks later, the beaten bodies of the missing volunteers were recovered, killed by a KKK lynch mob that had the protection of local police.

Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel, second from right, participating in the civil rights march from Selma to Montgomery, Alabama, on March 21, 1965. in St. Augustine, Florida, in 1964 after a challenge to racial segregation in public accommodations. In 1965 Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel marched with Dr. King in Selma, Alabama.

Here locally, Hank Greenspun is known for his work with the NAACP and with the efforts toward integration. Later during the Welfare Rights Movement, Renee Diamond and other Jewish women were among the group who worked in many capacities with Ruby Duncan in the fight for justice for children and poverty-stricken mothers.

During the era of the 1960s, Rabbi Prinz stated, "I believe, the time has come to work together - for it is not enough to hope together, and it is not enough to pray together, but to work together for a morally renewed and united America."

In January 2020, at the Jewish film festival when the documentary about Rabbi Prinz and Dr. Martin Luther King was shown, a woman wanted to know where Black people were now that the Jewish community was under threat.

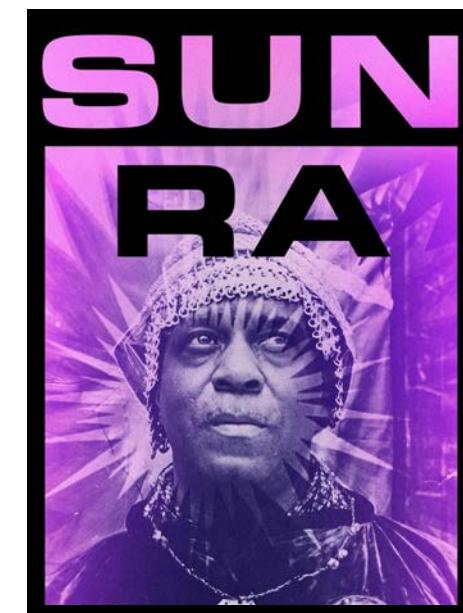

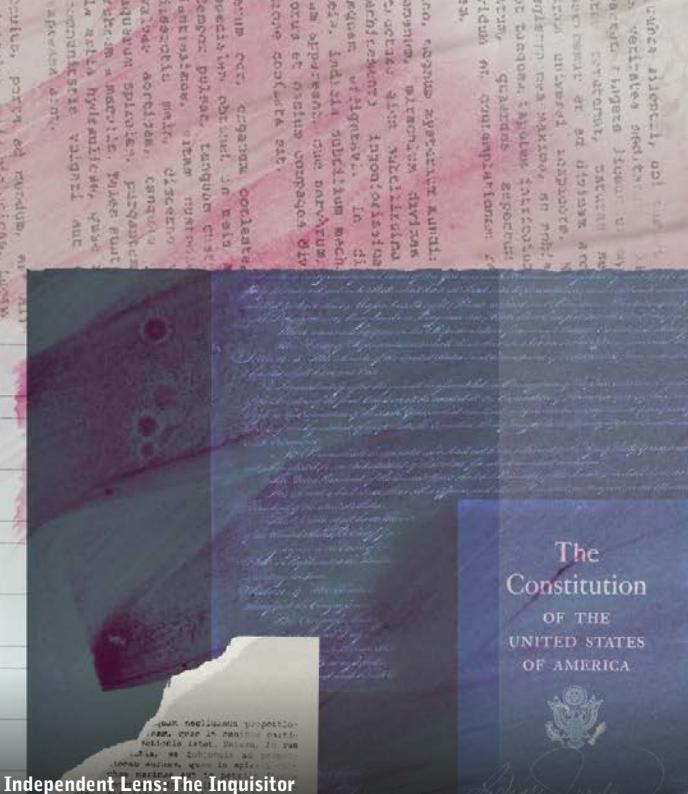

I mentioned that the threats against Black people were still looming greatly and that Black people were still mired down fighting redlining and other racist practices like unfair banking policies, the kindergarten to prison pipeline, unequal schools, undervalued neighborhoods and uneven pay.

Today, I would add to that picture of systemic racism that we are all One and no group should have to fight inequality and racism alone. It is a battle for every individual who claims to be humane, who claims to be kind, who claims to be fair-minded. They are coming for all of us... The famous poem

"...no group should have to fight inequality and racism alone."

ends, "Then they came for the Jews, and I did not speak out because I was not a Jew. Then they came for me and there was no one left to speak for me." There is no us, them, or they. We are one. We all must stand together without pointing fingers at any one group. We are the world — Asians, Africans, South Americans, North Americans, Europeans, Australians and those in Antarctica. No one can be left out. Together, we're saving our own lives.

Compass Points from PBS News

Sunday, February 8 at 6 p.m.

Compass Points takes an all-encompassing look at a prominent international topic each week to provide timely analysis with a panel of experts, including former government officials and journalists, on issues such as America's power and influence abroad, the shifting world order under the Trump Administration and what global conflicts and rising tensions could mean for America's interests. This program is hosted by Peabody and DuPont-Columbia award-winning journalist and PBS News Hour foreign affairs and defense correspondent Nick Schifrin.

NOVA: Killer Floods

Sunday, February 22 at 9 a.m.

All over the world, scientists are discovering traces of ancient floods on a scale that dwarfs even the most severe flood disasters of recent times. What triggered these cataclysmic floods, and could they strike again? In the Channeled Scablands of Washington State, the level prairie gives way to bizarre, gargantuan rock formations.

Secrets of the Dead: Mozart's Sister

Sunday, February 22 at 10 a.m.

Maria Anna Mozart was a musical prodigy just like her younger brother Wolfgang. Although the children toured Europe together, once Maria Anna came of age, she was left behind while her brother became a star. But controversial new evidence suggests she may have contributed to her brother's earliest works and a global search for her compositions continues.

Friday Nights With Henry Louis Gates, Jr. Favorites:

Making Black America: Through the Grapevine at 9 p.m.

Professor Gates sits with noted scholars, politicians, cultural leaders and old friends to discuss this world behind the color line and what it looks like today.

Great Migrations: People on the Move

at 10 p.m.

Great Migrations explores how a series of Black migrations have shaped America.

Black and Jewish America

at 11 p.m.

Explore the relationship between Black Americans and Jewish Americans — forged in shared struggle, tested by division.

Local, USA

Mondays, February 2 and 9 at 10:30 p.m.

Innovation

February 2

Explore how HBCU programs are changing and saving lives. Howard University is making history with the only Division One swim program at an HBCU while also teaching the Black community to swim. Claflin University's SmartHOME technology connects a person's physical state to actions to help mitigate health risks, hoping to combat healthcare disparities in minority communities.

Silence in Sikeston

February 9

Learn the story of how the 1942 lynching of Cleo Wright and the subsequent failure of the first federal attempt to prosecute a lynching continues to haunt the small city of Sikeston, Missouri. Then, in 2020, the community is faced with the police killing of a young Black father.
