The Cavemen, The Castle, and The Cockpit

By Matthew Modlin
Five cavemen come out of the cave and sit around a fire. John asks them, "Why aren't you playing video games?" They answer, "What are video games?" John is stunned, "Where am I?" he wonders.

The cavemen leave to pick berries. John tries to go with them but the time tunnel grabs him and sends him to the 1200s.
Chapter II: Medieval Battle

This time he lands near a castle partially surrounded by men with weapons and catapults.

John strolls up to a man in front with a sword and shield with a red cross on it. John asks him, “Why aren’t you playing video games?” The man answers sweatily, “Whatever they are, I’m too busy to play them. I’m in the middle of a battle.”

John ducks to avoid getting hit by a cannonball. However, another one lands right in front of him, launching him into the time tunnel.
Chapter III: In the Cockpit

John lands in the cockpit of a Boeing 737 about to take off. He decides to wait until the plane is in the air to talk to the pilots.

John is fascinated as he watches the pilots flip switches and throttle up the airplane engines for take-off. “This is way more fun than video games!” he exclaims.
As the plane lifts into the air, the time tunnel pulls John back to his desk. He takes off his headphones and proclaims, “I really need to get outside and live in the world.”

John grabs his backpack and heads out for a hike in the woods.
