One of the best parts of winter is playing in the snow! In Not Enough Snow, a young boy imagines all the fun activities he'll do once there's enough snow on the ground. When a big snowstorm hits, will his dreams finally come true? While reading this story, students will have the opportunity to identify the author’s purpose as well as make, revise, and confirm predictions. Detailed illustrations, repetitive text, and high-frequency words support early readers.
Ugh! There’s too much snow!
It snowed last night! My winter plans are back on. “First, please shovel the sidewalk,” Dad says.
Dad says it will snow tonight.
We’ll see.

It’s the middle of winter.
Where’s all the snow?
My winter plans are ruined.

I can’t have any winter fun!
I don’t have enough snow.
I can’t dig snow tunnels.
I don’t have enough snow.

I can’t make a snow family.
I don’t have enough snow.
I can’t build a snow fort.
I don’t have enough snow.

I can’t roll a mountain of snowballs.
I don’t have enough snow.
