Caregiver Tips

Talk about the change from summer to fall. Ask your child how they think the weather will change and write down their ideas. Discuss how weather can look colorful—blue, gray, or pink skies—and have them draw sunny or cloudy days. Review the weather chart together and ask what patterns they notice.

Extended Activities

As you and your child observe and record what you notice, make a weather journal. It's helpful to ask your child questions. Here are some suggestions:

- How would you describe today's weather?
- How does today's weather make you feel?
- Do you remember what yesterday's weather was like? How is it different from what you notice about today's weather?
