

PREMIERES JUNE 22 AT 8PM

In the harsh winter of 1779, John Donelson commanded a flotilla of 30 flatboats, carrying over 100 settlers, on a perilous, 1,000-mile river expedition from Fort Patrick Henry to colonize what would eventually become Nashville. In this documentary, award-winning photographer John Guider retraced this journey in a hand-built, 14.5-foot motorless rowing sailboat. The film reexamines Nashville's settlement story through previously marginalized voices: the enslaved people who had no choice in the perilous journey, the Cherokee whose lands were invaded, and the rivers themselves, which have been dramatically transformed over two centuries.
